

International Law (LLB)

This program is offered by the College of Humanities and Social Sciences/Law, Crime and Social Justice Department. It is available in person at Webster University Tashkent.

Program Description

The Bachelor of Laws in International Law is designed to help graduates enter the legal profession outside of the United States. We offer a solid, broad-based education including legal specialty courses. Students will learn both the theoretical and practical aspects of the law as they gain knowledge and an understanding of the ethical framework in which legal professionals function.

Note: This degree is not approved by the American Bar Association.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the program, students will be able to:

- Acquire knowledge, understanding and application of fundamental legal concepts and principles;
- Evaluate the foundations of the international legal environment;
- Demonstrate knowledge of primary legal holdings within the field of international law;
- Differentiate legalities between national law systems and structures;
- Describe and critically evaluate key substantive and procedural concepts in public and private law;
- Apply relevant law to real cases and offer reasoned opinions supported by the legal ecosystem; and
- Demonstrate transferable skills in legal research, writing, problem-solving and communication.
